

The Scleral Lens Education Society (SLES), founded to educate contact lens practitioners of the science and art of prescribing all forms of scleral contact lenses has announced its collaboration with The Contact Lens Society of America (CLSA), founded to educate, promote, and advance the contact lens profession.

Both organizations support public and practitioner education as well as professional development in the area of contact lenses, and will be investigating opportunities to work together to promote a mutual goal of scleral lens education.

SLES and CLSA are comprised of contact lens specialists including international fitters, who are well versed in all contact lens designs including scleral lenses.

Together SLES and CLSA will work to develop new and innovative scleral lens education to provide eye care practitioners with every opportunity to maximize their contact lens experience.
